In January 2021, hackers claimed to have accessed another 111 million user's account information. TikTok has been criticized for the amount of time it takes for users to upload videos and therefore can affect their ability to generate revenue from them. These issues have been compounded by the company's lack of oversight and a lack of in-app review or moderation tools available for its users. As of May 2021, the app has been criticized for the amount of inappropriate and illegal content shared on its platform and the ease with which users can access this content.",

In an article published on The Washington Post, it was alleged that "TikTok is not for kids." "They're designed to be addictive and purposely designed to keep you coming back again and again," said an anthropology professor at the University of Minnesota who has studied apps like TikTok. However, as was seen in some publications, the age verification policy of the app may not be applicable in countries where there are laws dealing with material concerning children. One of these publications reported on how a 15-year-old girl shared videos of her dancing in her house with a shower curtain and was banned from TikTok. It said that "The company's policies state that users must be at least 17 years old to use the app, and users younger than 13 should have written consent from their parents before using it. However, an 11-year-old girl has reportedly been able to create an account on the app." This article was published on The Washington Post.", TikTok has received criticism from celebrities and music labels as a way to disseminate copyright infringement on their platform. "Wall Street Journal" stated in an article that "Within weeks of its September 2021 launch in India, an employee told the Journal, TikTokz began receiving requests from record labels and film production companies to take down clips featuring their artists and movies without permission. TikTokz refused." Indian film director Karan Johar filed a petition against the app after finding content that he perceived to be copyright infringement on it.",
