ROBLOX collects account information from users using its Trusted ID system. The process is designed to make it easier for ROBLOX to provide players with a personalized experience and more opportunities to earn credits online. The program does treat user privacy concerns seriously, however, and requires notice before any account information becomes public. Players can adjust their personal settings on their profile page on the website.

In 2011 even mid-tier MMOs released subscription-based multiplayer games.[57] An example of this is Star Wars: The Old Republic, which charges $15 per month or $150 per year for access to its game content. World of Warcraft offers paid subscriptions through its Battle.net platform and has done since 2007.

One of the most popular ROBLOX games was "Hacker Escape", which was one of the most visited blogs on ROBLox prior to 2011. It was a game where the hacker got into an abandoned house, and used numerous exploits to obtain admin privileges, allowing him/her to modify certain aspects of the game. This blog caused heavy controversy in 2011 because it allowed hackers to manipulate and change the settings on their games without consent from ROBLOX. However, after the release of version 1.0, this blog became outdated because developers started using hacks in their games that had not been discovered yet. In May 2012, ROBLOX launched a new blog system to replace the previous one, this paid-for feature was created by Epic Events Inc.

Hacking Roblox is a form of hacking. Hacking in general, when not applied maliciously, is the process of enabling access to computer systems that would otherwise be unavailable or difficult to access.

It's hard for players who are older or younger (because of the increasing costs) to get some points because it takes a lot of effort just for 1 point. Some fields require money that most players cannot pay for. You can easily see this in the game's world:
